Detailed Action

Reissue Application

35 U.S.C. 102 Rejection

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 25 and 27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Unger et al.

Unger et al disclose (see fig.8) a method for processing a source compressed data stream. The system includes processing a source compressed data stream that has a first type (unique word and string entries, 206) and second type (canonical (i.e. predetermined) and supplemental dictionary entries, 210) of source segments, the system includes selectively modifying a status (i.e. tokenizing) associated with information of said first type of source segments to generate first target segments (for search indexing, 216), the first processing operative to selectively modify the status without decompressing information in the first type source segments.

Unger et al recites (col.15, ln.66 to col.16, ln.15):

“unlike in many schemes that employ end-to-end binary compression, a portion of the file composed only of some data from one or more blocks can be decompressed without reading or decompressing any other block from secondary storage (disk) or memory.

In addition to the reduced time to transmit or retrieve the stored material the compressed tokenized form of the text can be searched directly without requiring decompression. This is accomplished by using the referenced predetermined and supplementary dictionaries to “lookup” the tokens for any search words, phrases or strings that are to be found. Once these search targets are appropriately tokenized with the same vocabulary that was used to encode the source material the required token sequences can be searched for instead of the actual character strings."

3. Claims 1-24 are allowed.

4. Claim 26 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Kumar et al disclose pattern matching by position numbers for source pattern and target patterns within ordered sequences of compressed data.

Okada disclose compressing data strings inputted from source data consisting of differing languages.

Grossman et al disclose a header compression system and was cited in the originally filed application.
